

FREEDOM IN THE WORKPLACE

The untold story of the merit shop crusade against compulsory trade union membership in America's construction industry

You Will Never Look at America's Workplace the Same Way Again!

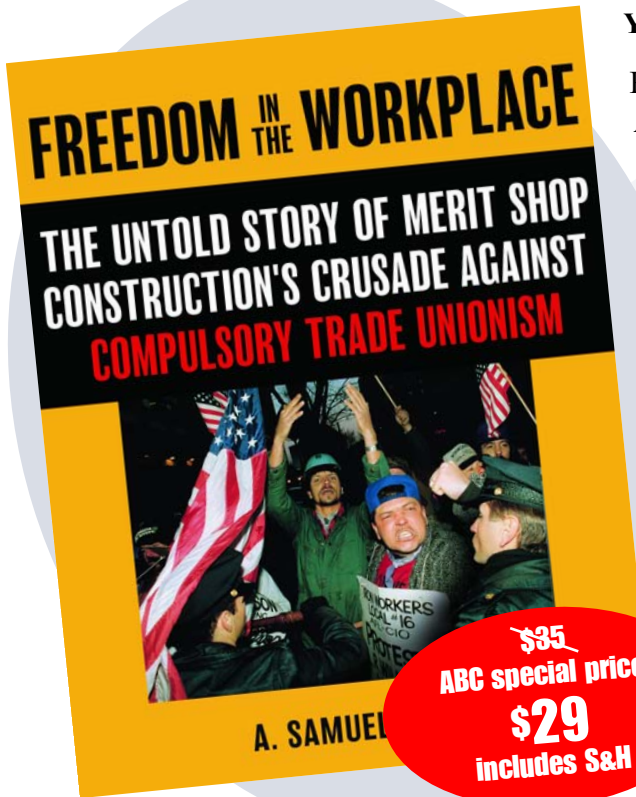

Renowned labor relations attorney, A. Samuel Cook, reveals the untold story of a half-century war between his client, the "merit shop" Associated Builders and Contractors (ABC) and the AFL-CIO Building and Construction Trades union in this compelling "must read" book.

A. Samuel Cook

Cook describes the physical, political, legal and moral collision between two distinct philosophies: free enterprise versus compulsory union membership and provides readers with war stories about how terrorism erupted in America's construction workplace, about Big Labor's political privileges and illegal immunities and why, against all odds, the merit shop ABC enjoys outstanding success today.

"Broken bones, torn bodies, death threats, arson, and the destruction of property are not philosophic differences of opinion," says Cook.
